THE SACRED HEART SCHOOL OF MONTREAL

God speed and bon voyage to the graduates of 1988. May those truths you have learned at the Sacred Heart be your guiding light. As you reflect on the joys and laughter, the tears and sorrows of those five years, you will discover that they were good years, character-building years. Isn't character what life is all about? Each one has within her hidden strength - the strength to give and to love. May you forge ahead drawing on that God-given strength to explore the wonder and the mystery that is life. I know you will because you have proved yourselves here at the City House to be true Wallabee-clad children of His Sacred Heart.

M. Johnson, R.S.C.J., Headmistress

MESSAGES

Mrs. Julie Schnitzer

It is a joyful experience for me to observe the graduates of 1988. As you approach the end of your five years here at Sacred Heart, you seem charged with a special energy. Your days are filled to the brim. And, you are looking forward to so many new and exciting things. The future is bright with promise.

But I also see you in your reflective moments. The warm memories of the people you have known and the times you have shared make you reluctant to move on. As you consider your past and future, I believe that you have a better understanding of the importance of the present moments.

May you always cherish the value of the past, the present and the future - it makes life rich!

Miss Eileen McGurk, Director of Studies

By the time you read this, you will have traded in your Sacred Heart uniform for the more casual "regulation" dress of a college student. Did you truly believe that you would never wear a uniform again?

Almost all of us follow styles and conform to the dictates of fashion. Why? Primarily through a need to belong, to be accepted, to feel attractive.

I hope that you will let the memory of your all too vilified Sacred Heart uniform, from fashionless blue tunic to dilapidated suede Wallabees, serve as a hitching post for a more important memory. Remember that for the last five years you were accepted, you were considered attractive - in body and soul - and you did, and always will, belong. You were and are a Sacred Heart girl. And, if ever you begin to doubt yourself, come back to visit. We'll set the record straight because we really do believe in you.

Until we meet again, "May the Lord bless you and keep you, may He shine His face upon you and be gracious to you, may He uncover His face to you and bring you peace". Numbers 6: 24-26

Mrs. Kathleen McNally, Guidance Counsellor

As you leave Sacred Heart I wish all of you a very happy and healthy life. I think you will find that the education which you received here will be invaluable to you - both academically and personally.

You are about to enter a very exciting phase of your education where you will have the opportunity to explore new avenues of thought. I would encourage you to follow your interests and to not be too concerned if it takes you some time to sort out goals. Keep in mind that you may change directions at any time in your life. The important point is that you continue to learn and to grow.

It has been my pleasure to know you over the past five years and I hope that you will keep in touch as alumna.

On the endangered species list for a few years, the once abundant Wallabeeys Sacred Heartys, easily recognizable by its 'cute' up-turned nose and thick rubber soles, is now nearing extinction. Unforgettable incidents: overload on ketchup in Macbeth with Marilyn, Anuska's 'scary' bedtime stories in Stratford, snowshoeing in downtown Mtl school yard, dissecting piglets in Bio while learning about the sanctity of life in Religion, MC's distribution of oranges to hungry classmates during History, 'Daisy's' Pink Feet: mental stress I guess. SANGITA GOMES

My impression of being at Sacred Heart for five years is great. Though there were times when things could have been different, I generally enjoyed my days here. These words remind me of my life in school: adventurous, baking, chaotic, desk cleaning, energy, fairs, general assembly, house points, ice cream, jello, kinetics, lectures, and mass. These words remind me of my friends: nice, ordinary, pleasant, quiet, reassuring, sarcastic, truthful, understanding, vain, weird, x-cellent, young at heart, and zoologists! I never thought I would survive five years, but I have; we all have. Remember History and Physics and Math and everything else? It was a pleasure for me to be a part of the Class of '88. Wishing everyone happiness and success. Enjoy life.

OUR YEAR

TO THE GRADS OF '88
Kim Moore Ede

Four years had passed since we had come to the school.
We'd not done some homework.
We'd broken some rules.

Then . . .

"Sec. V -
it's finally here!
We're graduating!" is yelled by all with a cheer.

"We won't be returning next year in the fall . . .
On to C.E.G.E.P.!"
is heard in the halls.

When dressed
in our caps and gowns, we'll be all smiles -
not many will frown.

Then, we will realize
with a sudden start:
"This is our Alma Mater.
We're leaving Sacred Heart!

All the good friends that we have made here - we might never see them again," will be said with a tear.

Later, we may look back at these days with a smile, or, possibly forget them
after a while.

But all I ask of each of you is to remember that we were great, a very special class - the Grads of '88!

VISION

SONNET 27
Rosanne Karith

Dedicated to Cyrano de Bergerac - who must have had troubles when it came to courting women!

My love, why do you shun my loving moves
I try to woo; laughter comes from my dear
I follow thee through busy streets and groves
N'er a response shall my ears ever hear.
The reasons for her aversion I seek Yet in vain I know not why t'is so Perhaps my love thinks me too faint and meek
I truly love her but I'm filled with woe.
I must let her know, my life I'd lay down
For my love I'd scale braes; cross any sea
Yet always she greets me bearing a frown
I pray, tell me why she despises me
Hail mirror reveal to me that which she knows
Dear God, me thinks she must have seen my nose.

THE TULLE
Christine Kennedy

Joe brought the tulle
to my house
today — But he had made a mistake

I knew as soon as I saw it that it was Different — It was not the tulle that I had chosen

I insisted that it was Different Grandma said no — It didn't have the same Something the Something was Unique not Different

Unique — Grandma said that I had to make do
I said that I would not make do

I wanted
the tulle that I had chosen

HER SILENT WORLD
Parvathy Nair

The warm breeze drifted through the window,
Whispering secretly to the listening leaves.
But she didn't hear him.
Only toes tingled at his touch.

The passionate waves of the ocean thundered
As they crashed and cracked violently against the rocks.
But she didn't hear them.
Only tired eyes saw their beauty.

The faint, sweet notes of music were in the air,
Comforting the sad hearts of men and women.
But she didn't hear them.
Only sensitive fingers felt the gentle vibrations.

She never heard the young girl's laugh,
Or the inviting call of a dinner bell.
She only saw a tear-stained face,
Not the pain of a despairing sob.
They passed her by, like so often, they passed me by.

She sat alone in her silent world,
Unable to hear what I hear too often.
Blind is the seer; dumb is the orator,
And I, a listener, remain deaf.

INSIGNIFICANT INSECURITY
Patricia Dy

As I gaze through the rain splattered window
Feelings of confusion racing through me
Try as hard as I might, it haunts me so
This sensation of insecurity.
I don't understand what life has come to This feeling of sheer helplessness I face
Not in full control of my life, it's true
That my existence is an empty space.
Ghosts from the past, shadows from my childhood Reach out, clinging to me, taunting me, for A desperate moment, if only I could Relive those days of innocence once more
If only I knew then what I know now
Then my life would not be so full of doubt.

HOPE FOR HAPPINESS
Anuska Garcia

There is something in my blood
Which makes me want to run.
There is a hopefulness in me
That makes me reach for the sun.
There is a peacefulness in me
That made my battles won.
There is a hope for happiness.

I feel the light come shining through -
Must be my joyfulness.
Last night my heart was like a stone
Because of foolishness.
Now I realize what I missed,
I need some gratefulness.
Oh, yes, there is definitely some hope for happiness.

And, in the moments of despair,
My inner self cries out.
The more I cry, the more I hurt.
My mind is full of doubt.
Should I stay alive or die?
What is life all about?
It is the pursuit of happiness.

And, now I'm lying here alone.
The tears are dried away.
The pain is gone. The window is open.
It is a bright, sunny day.
Oh, thank God, I'm still alive.
And, now I can honestly say -
I'm going to find my happiness.

THE FIELD OF FLOWERS
Suzie Massoud

When all is dark,
and nothing seems to be going right,
just close your eyes and think of me,
in the field of flowers.

When you feel lonely,
and anger has taken you over,
just block everything out and think of me,
in the field of flowers.

When life no longer seems worth living, search for that little bit of encouragement inside - and think of me,
in the field of flowers.

I know the world isn't a perfect place, but only wait; wait a while,
until I come to you,
and together, we'll go walking, in the field of flowers.

THE WIND
Nicole Calinouiu

She drew her collar over her ears and took another step forward, straining against the cold wind that threatened to uproot her and carry her to its unknown destination. The wind blew the mist of her frozen breath back to her face, frosting her eyelashes and brows, making it impossible for her to see.

Not that sight was of the least importance. The landscape was eternal and unchanging. Snow covered the ground to the horizon and, where the wind had found roots, only ice remained. Snow, ice, one woman - and the wind. It came from the north, and north she walked - not of choice, but of necessity. To the south lay nothing but an endless expanse of ice and snow. To the north she would find others - somewhere to the north.

One foot in front of the other, she fought the wind. Often, the wind won, flinging her back onto a sheet of ice and forcing snow into her collar and boots. And yet, it was her only companion in her search for the others of whose existence she was no longer certain.

She ran out of water, which she had kept in a small container under her coat and took to melting snow in her hands, but the wind and cold would turn it to ice almost before it reached her lips.

When she slept, it was in the shelter of a small hillock or covered in snow under the occasional stunted tree. The wind would rock her to bed at night and caress her sleeping face with snow-filled tendrils of air. Slowly they became friends, the woman and the wind. When she was forced back into a snow drift by its strength, she thanked him for the chance to rest and, on occasion, he would rest for a moment in order to let her cross a difficult or icy patch of ground.

Slowly, she grew to love him for, without the wind, she would have been completely alone. He, too, began to feel love for his strange woman-thing that had invaded his land, this strange animal that now belonged to him. And when she walked near a village, he would carry the smell of cooking meat and the sounds of laughing children away from her in order that she not be saddened by her solitude.

In the spring, when the Sun came to melt the snow, and the frozen body of a young woman was uncovered, the wind sang his grief over the land.

JEALOUSY
Allison Smith

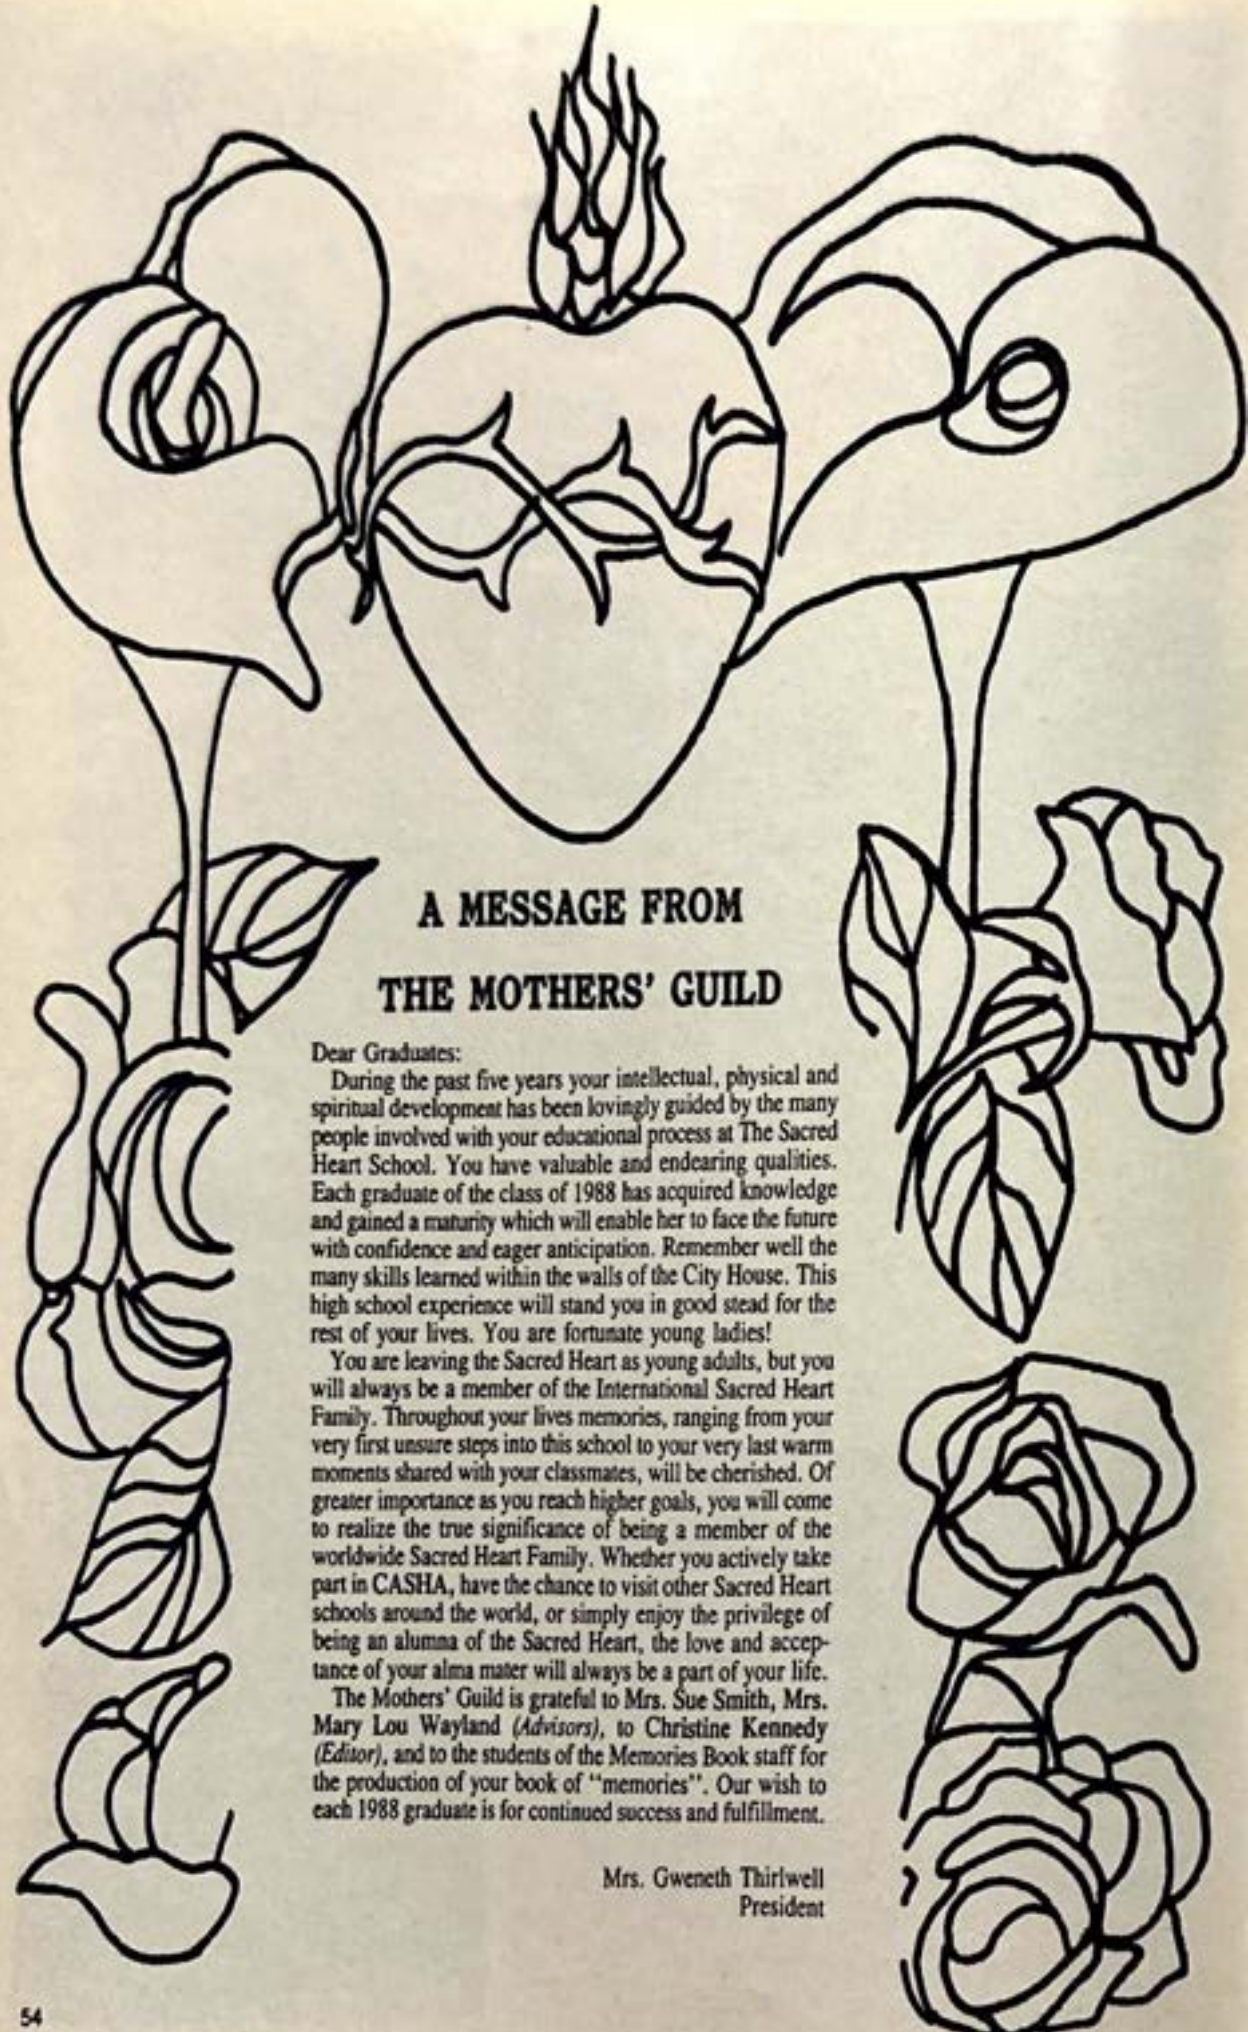
When we swallow Jealousy, she is very hard to digest. She sits in our hearts and eats away at our insides. She takes over our whole being, controlling our body and mind. She spits at our friends, chasing them away. She tries to fill the emptiness with expensive gifts but the void remains. She is very selfish and never shares. She is only happy when she feels that she is superior to everyone else. She never has a lover because her sharp bite scares him away.

JUSTICE
Andrea Chen

Justice wears a solemn face. He stands up high, looking paternally amongst the rest. He once told me that he was sorry for not always being there but said that eventually he'd get there. Justice is fair. He says that he's not biased; he says that he hangs around the ghettos but I don't believe him. He always seems to be helping out the richer kids. Justice's parents are humanity so he isn't perfect. I heard the other day that Justice helped to find the murderer of a small minority child. Humanity should be proud.

EYEFLOW

THE ANGEL



A MESSAGE FROM THE MOTHERS' GUILD

Dear Graduates:

During the past five years your intellectual, physical and spiritual development has been lovingly guided by the many people involved with your educational process at The Sacred Heart School. You have valuable and endearing qualities. Each graduate of the class of 1988 has acquired knowledge and gained a maturity which will enable her to face the future with confidence and eager anticipation. Remember well the many skills learned within the walls of the City House. This high school experience will stand you in good stead for the rest of your lives. You are fortunate young ladies!

You are leaving the Sacred Heart as young adults, but you will always be a member of the International Sacred Heart Family. Throughout your lives memories, ranging from your very first unsure steps into this school to your very last warm moments shared with your classmates, will be cherished. Of greater importance as you reach higher goals, you will come to realize the true significance of being a member of the worldwide Sacred Heart Family. Whether you actively take part in CASHA, have the chance to visit other Sacred Heart schools around the world, or simply enjoy the privilege of being an alumna of the Sacred Heart, the love and acceptance of your alma mater will always be a part of your life.

The Mothers' Guild is grateful to Mrs. Sue Smith, Mrs. Mary Lou Wayland (Advisors), to Christine Kennedy (Editor), and to the students of the Memories Book staff for the production of your book of "memories". Our wish to each 1988 graduate is for continued success and fulfillment.
